VAAD, MENDELSON ASK FOR $100,000 IN COURT

Father of Defendant Sued
Recently in Similar Case,
But Action Dropped.

The similarity in appearance of the Hebrew words, "boser" and "kosher" is again causing trouble.

Because Abraham Berezin, butcher, of 555 Clinton avenue, removed the word for "kosher" but retained the other he was named defendant this week in a $100,000 damage suit and was named in another action today.

Wednesday Benjamin Braelow, of 1060 Broad street, attorney for Vaad Hakashruth, kosher meat inspection body of Newark, and its chief rabbi, Rabbi Jacob Mendelson, filed suits of $50,000 for each in the Common Pleas Court against Mr. Berezin yesterday. Mr. Braelow filed a complaint in police court charging Mr. Berezin with violating the New Jersey statute of 1928 forbidding the sale of non-kosher products under the implication that it is kosher. Trial was set for next Thursday morning at 9 o'clock in the Sixth Precinct Criminal Court.

The defendant is the son of Harry Berezin, who was sued recently in the Court of Chancery to restrain him from selling meat while displaying a sign of approval of its "kashruth" by the Vaad although as a non-member, he was not entitled to do so. This action was dropped by Mr. Braelow when the store at 114 Watson avenue was sold by the elder Berezin.
